METHOD AND APPARATUS FOR ACCURATE PROFILING OF COMPUTER PROGRAMS

CROSS REFERENCE TO RELATED APPLICATIONS

Sub
AA' 10 This application is related to U.S. Ser. No.
07/970,315, filed on November 2, 1992, which is a continuation of U.S. Ser. No. 07/718,573, filed on June 21, 1991, now U.S.
Pat. No. 5,193,180.

BACKGROUND OF THE INVENTION

005240-25560 15 The present invention relates generally to a method and apparatus for profiling computer programs. In particular, one aspect of the present invention relates to a method for inserting additional instructions and data into existing relocatable object files of a computer program to collect very 20 detailed and accurate profiling information. Another aspect of the present invention relates to a method for converting profiling information into image data for communication to a user/developer.

25 Profiling is a technique commonly used by software developers to gain information about the operation of their code. This information can then be used to improve and optimize the code. Profiling is done by processing the program under development with a profiler. The profiler adds code to the executable file so that it records various types of 30 statistical data as the program runs. The type of data recorded varies with the profiler used.

35 One traditional and widely used profiler under UNIX is known as prof. Object code files are supplied to prof, which links the object files and adds monitoring routines to be executed at the beginning and end of the program. The initial routines set up a program sampler triggered by timing interrupts. The program sampler, which is invoked with a period of 1/100 of a second, records the value of the program counter register. The routines added to the end of the program
